Key Qualifications

Orre is educated in political science and social anthropology. His research focus is on Angola and Mozambique for more than two decades, and he has followed political development in Venezuela closely over the last 15 years.

He has held a leading role in CMI's cooperation programme with Catholic University of Angola, which focusses on the Angolan "oil state" and how its politics and economy can be reformed toward more equitable social and economic development. He has also enjoyed various long-term research partnerships in Mozambique, and had a central role in setting up the U4 Anti-Corruption Resource Centre at CMI.

Recently he researched the political economy in Mozambique, including the consequences of grand corruption (the Hidden Debt Scandal). Currently he coordinates a major research project on the war in Northern Mozambique. Current research interests also include the role of China in Africa; media, public space and press freedom; taxation and public sector reform; the telecom sector; youth and authoritarian regimes in Africa; and women in the judiciary.

Orre has extensive experience in project and programme management, editing for publication, mixed-method research, planning and carrying out surveys, interview-based methodology (more than 700 interviews in Angola and Mozambique) and the organisation of conferences. He has been instrumental in the establishment of the new master programme in the Development and Resource Economics at UCAN.

He has participated in long- and short term studies, including consultancies (for the Norwegian MFA, NORAD, Mozambique Govn't), evaluations and extensive field work. He has lived and worked in Mozambique and Portugal.
